DESCRIPTION:

308 Camden:
Several of the homes in this grouping have a central bay which is in the shape of an abbreviated tower. In this case, it marks the separation between the one and two story portions of this Spanish Colonial Revival residence. The one story portion is punctuated by two rectangular windows with iron balconets and awning stands for ornamentation. The tower bay has two lattice work stucco vents above the recessed arched entry which is flanked by two small rectangular windows covered with wrought iron grilles. The front facing second story bay has a pair of casement windows on the upper story, which protrudes slightly over the ground level and is decorated with a series of corbels. A balcony is visible on the southern facade.
