DESCRIPTION:

Stark simplicity keynotes the design of this two story Spanish Colonial Revival residence. Its smooth, white stucco walls are nearly unbroken by windows on the facade. A red tile roof with hipped and gabled sections caps the asymmetrically organized structure. The entry is offset to the left (south) and set into an arched recess. It is approached via a small porch defined by a tiled shed roof which rests on cast stone columns and large corbels. A large window with an iron grille is located in the north half of the facade and provides a visual balance to the entry. Grilles and shutters also adorn other windows. No alterations were observed. The design of the house is complemented by a southwestern theme in the landscaping.
