DESCRIPTION:

A terra cotta path leads to the centered front door of this nearly symmetrically massed, two story, Mediterranean home. Low-pitched hipped roofs of clay tile, punctuated by exposed rafters in the eaves, surmount the stuccoed structure. The facade consists of two, two story hipped roof bays, between which a central section is recessed. The lower story of the central section projects forward of the upper, is topped by a tiled shed roof, and contains the entry. Framed by a Baroque arch ornamented with a shield, the panelled wood door is recessed behind iron gates. Three small windows with iron grilles are located on the bay above the entry. The remaining openings are balanced but not symmetrical in their design and organization, with a triple arch opening on the upper right (south) being the most notable. Hedges enclose the property which appears largely intact.
