DESCRIPTION:

The familiar vocabulary of the American Colonial Revival style distinguishes this two story home. Two story pillars define a five bay porch which spans the principal mass of the facade. This section, which is of brick construction, is extended on the south by a wood-framed, two story wing and a porte cochere, and on the north by a one story clapboarded wing. A simple entablature with a molded cornice tops the sidelit, central entry. Full height six-over-six double-hung sash windows fill the remaining lower story bays. Smaller six-over-six sash appear in each of the upper bays. Shutters adorn all of the window openings. In excellent condition, the residence retains its original designer's intent.
