DESCRIPTION:

This two story residence is sheathed in stucco, topped by a low-pitched, tiled hip roof, indicating its Mediterranean inspiration. A porte cochere, formed by archways, cuts through the south end of the lower story. A plain stringcourse bands the facade between stories, with shuttered casements appearing on the upper floor, and rather classically framed openings used on the lower floor. In the north half of the facade a full size casement with a small iron balcony interrupts the stringcourse. The entry is approximately centered, recessed, flat-headed, and contains a panelled door. The lower story surrounds may be an alteration.
