DESCRIPTION:

Not quite symmetrical in design, this two story Mediterranean home illustrates the regularity and simplicity which characterize the genre. A tiled, shallowly hipped roof caps the stuccoed, rectangular structure. A two story, raised bay with quoined edges is offset to the north. It contains a round-headed entry on the lower level and an arched window with a corbelled balcony on the upper level. To either side of the raised bay, paired casements with semi-circular transoms and iron balconets appear in the first floor bays. Paired casements flanked by decorated panels are centered above them. The house appears to be unaltered.
