DESCRIPTION:

This one-and-one-half-story Tudor Revival residence illustrates a variety of architectural conventions associated with the style. Its multi-gable roof is shingled and steeply pitched. Most of the house is sided with brick, although the north wing features pseudo-half-timbering on stucco. The entry, a panelled wood door set beneath a bellcast slope of a front gable, is flanked by panels of patterned brickwork. Similar panels on the opposite side of the entry are topped by a leaded glass diamond in a shuttered second floor window. Somewhat tropical landscaping provides a foil for the house.
