3) Use of the discretionary process in planning

Thomas White briefly explained what the item is about – that it is staff's responsibility to protect the residents' quality of life but instead staff is assisting developers get what they want instead of protecting the City's best interests. Debbie Weiss commented that in some occasions, she has seen staff fail to properly apply the code, such as with the 1260 Lago Vista project.

Ms. Healy Keene distributed a list of current development activity projects showing addresses of projects, a brief description of the project, date filed, the planner in charge, contacts, and activities currently going on or was done on the project.

Councilmember Wunderlich and Mayor Gold asked staff to present at the next meeting a list of projects showing the project status at different stages, with information on the following: whether the project is code compliant or not, the allowable FAR and what was approved, what the developer wanted and what was approved, planner in charge, and a list of lobbyists for the project. The Council liaisons asked to look back a span of three years to see the pattern of approval for projects.

Ms. Weiss pointed out that the information for 1184 Loma Linda on the handout is outdated and should be taken out.
