DESCRIPTION:

This Spanish Colonial Revival house presents an L-shaped facade to the street. The spine of the "L" is two stories and parallels the street, while the shorter leg is one story and perpendicular to the street. Stucco-sheathed, the building is capped by tiled hip and gable roofs. Arches are much in evidence, used in a porte cochere over the south, a niche in the garden wall, a three-bay arcade leading to the entry, and in a double chimney cap. Other typical Spanish features include stylized "buttresses," a second story overhang on large brackets, and shuttered casement windows. A three-sided bay window, usually associated with revival buildings in the late 30s and the 40s, may have been added.
