DESCRIPTION:

Strict symmetry governs the design of the principal facade of this two story, American Colonial Revival residence. Located on the northwest corner of Alpine and Lomas, the house is sheathed with brick and crowned by a side gable roof. Four round-headed dormers and a brick chimney rise above the roof surface. A semi-circular portico, framed by Tuscan Columns, marks the central entry. Above it, a balcony is overlooked by a pair of casements separated by a panel. On either side of the central bay, two bays of windows, casement on the lower story and six-over-six double-hung sash on the upper are equally spaced. Shutters and soldier arch lintels detail the openings. On the south a wood-sided wing is visible. Carefully pruned landscaping enhances the formal quality of the architecture.
